COLLEGE PENNANTS BY SCORES

Armory Beautifully Decorated for the Occasion—Reception From 8 Until 9 and Then the Dance Began. Many There From Out of Town.

A social event of prominence was the third annual Thanksgiving reception and dance of the Connelville High School Alumni held last evening in the Armory. The dance was the most successful one in the history of the Alumni and was pronounced as the most enjoyable event of the kind held in Connelville in recent years. The affair was complete in all its appointments. About 100 couples including a large number of out of town guests, were present. The decorations were unusually attractive as well as appropriate. Professions of pennants representing prominent colleges, as well as the local High School, were displayed in a very artistic manner, while palms and ferns were lavishly used. The pretty decorations and the elaborately gowned ladies presented a scene of great beauty. The reception was from 8 until 9 o'clock. The dancing line was composed of A. D. Sisson, E. T. Norton, Mrs. J. M. Young, Miss Nellie Brickman, Miss Pearl Kock, J. Hall Spier, Kirk Hunter and J. R. Mestrozzi.

The grand march, led by Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Norton, took place at 9.15. Dancing was general the remainder of the evening. The music furnished by Kiefer's orchestra was one of the best features of the dance. Throughout the evening dainty refreshments were served. The committee in charge was composed of Dr. Walter N. Goldsmith, Frederick Friess, Lloyd Johnston Shaw and Thomas Clifford Edmunds, and to them is due great credit for the success of the dance.

The committee desires to extend a vote of thanks to all persons who so kindly loaned pennants for decorations. The out of town guests were H. G. Blair, G. H. Bryner, Miss Maud Conway, Pittsburgh; J. H. Spear, Donora; H. E. Strawn, Miss Helen Flonniken, Miss Nettie Smith, G. G. Cochran, E. C. Shallenberger, J. W. Rau, Dawson; Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Maib, Kansas City; Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Fortney, Howard, Idaho; Miss Roberta Stauffer, John Ritz, Scotland; H. W. Ward, Mansfield; O. M. and Mrs. W. R. Dowden, Rose, Kentucky; E. E. Politz, I. B. Harris, Kennedy, Potter, Dunbar; S. E. Patterson and William James McCarthy, Greenburg, West Mead; J. A. Rist, Misses Margaret and Olive McManis, Uniontown; W. B. Green, Alexandria, Va.; J. B. Miller, Scott-dale; G. Hoon, Beaver Falls; B. Marshall, Miss Virginia Marshall, Youngstown; O. M. Walker, Miss Mary Rhodes, Sharpsburg; A. B. Spear, Uniontown; H. L. Strawn and B. C. Landenberger of Dawson, and Miss Dora V. Smith of Atlantic City.

RED CROSS CAR

To Improve Mine Rescue Work To Go on the Road.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Covering a wider field than the ordinary rescue station being put into service by the Bureau of Mines, a car will be put on the road by the American Red Cross Society about December 5, which will reach first aid to the injured work to railroad employees of factories, as well as covering other groups where there is danger. "The American Red Cross First Aid Car" will cover a somewhat different field than the Bureau of Mines car. It will do work in the mining districts and also will be available in case of mine disasters. The car which now is in Buffalo, N. Y., including its equipment, was presented to the American Red Cross Society by the Pullman Car Company, and the railroad. It is said, will have no charge for hauling the portable first aid school throughout the country. Dr. M. Whitfield Glasgow, of Birmingham, Ala., will have charge of the car.

Has Letter Signed by Doctor Crippen

Exhibited in William Herzberg's window on West Main street is a letter dictated and signed by Dr. H. C. Crippen, a copy of the Ontological Gazette, a small medical pamphlet edited and published by Dr. Crippen and a number of testimonials regarding the wonderful cures of Dr. Crippen. Mr. Herzberg secured the collection from a Pittsburgh detective, who is a friend of Mr. Herzberg and they will be in Mr. Herzberg's possession only a few days. In order to keep in touch with the shareholders of Dr. Crippen following the murder of his wife, Mr. Herzberg's friend wrote to Dr. Crippen while in London regarding treatment for ear trouble. The letter in reply to the detective's inquiry was dictated by Dr. Crippen July 12. The testimonial and medical pamphlet came at the same time.

A GROTESQUE BIRD.

Remarkable Assortment of Colors of the Brazilian Toucan.

The very peculiar looking Brazilian bird, the toucan, has a body about as big as that of a good sized parrot, but its beak is very different and easily its dominant feature, though this bird is by no means lacking in beauty and striking colors. The toucan's beak is half as long as its body, and it is broad and thin and set on edge vertically, shaped something like a blunted scythe, with the slightly curving, rounded edge on top and ending with a hook point turned downward—a remarkable beak in size and shape—and this beak is lined with a remarkable assortment of colors, purple and red and green and yellow, while around the beak at the head runs a line of black.

The eyes of the toucan are surrounded by circles of a bright light blue, and on its breast, regularly outlined, is a broad and deep expanse of bright yellow in size and shape in proportion to the bird about the same as the generous expanse of white feathers shown by a man in evening dress with a waist coat cut low and well rounded out at the bottom, this show of yellow being edged with a red line. The toucan's body for the bulk of it is black or a very deep blue black, but around at the base of the tail run two bands of color, one red and one white.

It is sold as a pet, not for children, but to adults, and it is more often fancied by men than by women. It takes $25 to $50 to buy a toucan.—New York Sun.

ROD AND LINE WON.

Contest Between a Strong Swimmer and an Expert Angler.

A novel contest took place some time ago at the Engleburgh corporation baths between one of the strongest swimmers in Scotland and a well known angler. The contest occurred in a pool eighty feet long and forty feet wide. The angler was furnished with an eleven foot trolling rod and an undressed fish line. The line was fixed to a girth belt, made expressly for the purpose, by a swivel immediately between the shoulders of the swimmer at the point where he had the greatest pulling power.

In the first trial the line snapped. In the second the angler gave and played without altogether slackening line, and several porpoise dives were well handled. The swimmer then tried corner swimming from corner to corner, but ultimately was beaten, the match ending with a victory for the rod and line.

Another contest took place in which the angler employed a very light trolling rod ten feet long and weighing only six and one-half ounces, the line being the same as that used with the trolling rod. The swimmer, whose aim evidently was to anchor the rod, pulled and leaped into the water. He was held steadily, however, and in about five minutes was forced to give in. The rod was again successful. At the finish both competitors were almost exhausted.

Want Their Children Thieves. The Kakha Khels, a tribe that inhabits the country of the Khyber pass in northern India, are thieves and consider thieving a most honorable occupation. A young woman of the Kakha Khel will not look at a young man unless he is proficient in the art. The dearest wish of a mother is that her little boy may become a cunning thief. Every child is consecrated, as it were, at its birth to crime. A hole is made in the wall similar to that made by a burglar, and the mother passes the infant backward and forward through the hole, singing in its ear: "Be a thief! Be a thief! Be a thief!" They are probably the only tribe in India who glorify in thieving and take it to the dignity of a regular calling.—Christian Herald.

Sugar. Our word "sugar" is said to be derived from the Arabic "sukkar," the article itself having got into Europe through the Arabian Mohammedans, who so often a great part of the world in the seventh, eighth and ninth centuries. According to Dr. Van Lippman, a Dutch writer, as a result of the Arab invasion of Persia sugar found its way into Arabia, whence again its culture was carried to Cyprus, Rhodes Sicily and Egypt. In the last named country the preparation of sugar was greatly improved, and the Egyptian product became widely famous. From Egypt the industry spread along the northern coast of Africa and so entered Spain, where, about the year 1150, some fourteen refineries were in operation. Columbus introduced sugar cane into the new world.—Argonaut.

Jack Sheppard as a Text. Jack Sheppard had a great hold upon the imagination of the people of his time. The fact that 200,000 people witnessed his execution at Tyburn on Nov. 18, 1721, "upon the tree that bears twelve times a year" is some witness to his grim popularity. But one of the strongest tributes ever paid him was the sermon preached upon him in a London church. "Oh, that you were all like Jack Sheppard!" began the preacher, to the stupefaction of his congregation. He went on to draw a parallel between things of the flesh and those of the soul and to point out that the genius shown in housebreaking might have been bestowed upon "picking the locks of the heart with the nail of repentance."—London Standard.

SOCIETY.

Birthday Surprises.

H. A. Glatfelter was agreeably surprised last evening when a number of his friends assembled last evening at his home in East Fairview avenue to assist in the celebration of his birthday anniversary. The affair was a most delightful one and was cleverly planned by several of his relatives. Various amusements were indulged in and at a late hour an elaborate luncheon was served.

The Firemen's Dance.

Large and enjoyable was the 17th annual Thanksgiving dance of the West Side Fire Department held last evening in the West Side Auditorium. The dance was a great success and was well arranged by the committee in charge. Dancing commenced at 8.30 o'clock and was kept up until midnight. A number of out of town guests were present.

New Center Will Play Tomorrow

For tomorrow night's game against Johnstown, the Cokes will have a new center in Elliott, a likely looking young fellow who was given a trial with Johnstown last year. Elliott was loaned by Fogarty because the Johnstown manager thought too well of him. He will be given a thorough trial with the Cokes and it is believed he will make good.

Elliott will report to the team here tomorrow morning. It is expected that Sherwood Magee, the star baseball player, will also make his appearance then. It is possible that Magee may drop into town this afternoon although he is not expected until in the morning. It was stated this morning that most another man will report to the Cokes. He is a crack center from down east although his identity was not divulged.

Surprise Given for F. E. Oglevee

A surprise was given F. E. Oglevee last night at his Vanderbilt home when more than 20 of his friends dropped in rather unexpectedly and spent the evening playing progressive poker and eating turkey. The surprise was given by members of Mr. Oglevee's family, who prepared the dinner in anticipation of entertaining a number of decidedly hearty appetites. The dinner was pronounced by W. D. McGinnis, who is something of an epicure, the best turkey dinner that was ever served and there was far too much for beneficent assimilation. There were no prizes for the poker experts. Had there been, A. J. Cochran, with the highest number of points would have won the first. Burgess J. L. Evans of Connelville was second. There were six from Connelville present, W. D. McGinnis, J. L. Evans, Dr. C. S. Horner, Dr. Hugh Baker, Dr. H. C. Hoffman and J. W. McClure.

Condition Remains Same.

The condition of David Percy, who was removed to the Mercy hospital for treatment on last Friday, remains about the same. An operation will not be performed and Mr. Percy will return home in a week or so.

JOHNSTOWN KICKS.

New Schedule of the B. & O. Does Not Suit There at All.

Johnstown is making a kick against the new schedule of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad on its Somerset & Cambria branch. The objection is to starting the morning train to Rockwood at 7.10 instead of 6 o'clock, as at present.

Traveling men are kicking because the earlier leaving time will get them to towns along the branch long before stores are opened for business. The change was made for connection with No. 57 at Rockwood. Johnstown people claim that the proposition of passengers who desire to make No. 57 at Rockwood is small compared with the number who travel to towns along the branch.

THURSDAY EVE'G., NOV. 24, 1910.

THANKSGIVING DAY. PAST AND PRESENT.

Thanksgiving Day is a day annually set apart by general sanction and official proclamation for the primal purpose of giving thanks to the Supreme Being for the blessings which have been vouchsafed us individually and collectively during the past year. The peasant will say he has nothing to be thankful for, but many things to complain of. The latter may be true, but the former is not. Besides, the peasant mistakes the purpose of the day. We give thanks for the things we have enjoyed, not for the things we have endured. We try to forget the evil and remember the good.

Thanksgiving Day was established by the Pilgrim Fathers in the infancy of Plymouth, nearly three centuries ago, and it remains an American institution to this day. The Pilgrims were a handful, huddled on the bleak Atlantic shore. Before them was the ocean, storm-tossed and angry; behind them, the howling wilderness, peopled by savage foes; in their midst stalked gaunt famine and glacial plague. But if their faith was stern their purpose was high; if their situation seemed desperate, their hearts were stout; and with firm determination they set themselves to the task of overcoming the obstacles which nature and circumstance had placed in their path. Way, and in the heart of the struggle when fate seemed darkest and victory furthest from them, they gave thanks to that God in whom they placed their trust that they were still alive and able to fight life's battle bravely. They forgot their ill and remembered only the hopes they had for the future; hopes, it will be recalled, that blossomed in the sunshine of thereafter, and helped to lay the foundation of the greatest republic the world ever knew.

The average American citizen of today has infinitely more to be thankful for than those who established this Thanksgiving Day. The cost of his living may be high and his income relatively low. He may be in ill-health, but he has more comfort, more scientific treatment, more hope of recovery, than those who suffered at Plymouth in 1621. If he but has health and strength, he has all and more than the Puritan forefathers had, because he has more and greater opportunities to turn them to profit. He has much more to hope for than those who founded this day and conditions appalling to other than hearts full of courage and faith.

We have much to be thankful for, and on this day we will do well to give a brief review of our busy lives to various introspection. We do not stop in our headlong existence often enough to contemplate the past and think of the future from other standpoint than those of cold and calculating business, or mind and intoxicating pleasures.

On this Thanksgiving Day, therefore, let us remember that the present might be worse, and that the future is not without the slint of hope; and, for the blessings which have been our portion in the past, and the hope of others in the future, let us be thankful!

Wisconsin's new Socialist Congressmen is trying to keep himself in the limelight by blaming the Mexican revolution on J. Pierpont Morgan. The statement is somewhat far-fetched.

Connellsville's busy day continues to buzz and stir.

BERRY'S EXPENSE ACCOUNT NEEDS EXPLANATION.

When the Honorable William H. Berry was making his whirlwind campaign for Governor, he frequently and positively assured the people that he was the only real virtuous thing in politics, and that the Republican party was a synonym for venality.

Since the voting is over, he declares he was defeated by bribery and corruption, and he threatens to contest the election.

Yet he files an expense account which is manifestly a mere invention.

Among his contributions, he itemized one as anonymous. This is contrary to the provision of the Corrupt Practices Act which says:

It shall be unlawful for any candidate or treasurer of a political committee, or person acting as such, to receive or disburse any money received from any anonymous source.

Among his expenditures were found these items:

Traveling expenses, $250; clerk hire, $20; Contribution to Delaware county committee, $50; telephone and telegraph, $20; postage and stationery, $30; total, $370.

The even amounts specified for traveling expenses, telephone and stationery are evident guesses and bad ones at that. The Honorable Berry was campaigning all over the State for a couple of months, during which time he sent some telegrams, too. It is evident that his expense account materially misrepresents his expenditures, unless they were paid out of the Keystone campaign fund.

There is much in the Honorable Berry's account which needs explaining.

The object of the Auto Club has been discovered at last. The secret is out in spite of audacious attempts at concealment. The motorists have combined for mutual protection and the advancement of their common interests. It's a joy. Trust composed of Greasy Commercialism and Manufacturers of Great Wealth. It will doubtless hear from both Editor Roosevelt and Editor Bryan.

Uncle Bob Kennedy, Uniontown's biggest buchanan fan, is a candidate for President of the National League. We have always felt that he would be President some day. "Dan for Bob!"

McKeespoot gets $20,000 back by having its accounts audited by expert accountants. Professional auditors are well paid, but the scheme is sometimes remarkably economical.

The Steel Corporation doesn't need any more coke ovens just at present, but it wouldn't hurt to double the size of the furnace in the plate plant at South Connellsville. That is it wouldn't hurt Connellsville.

The establishment in Connellsville of an internal revenue stamp agency ought not to await the construction of the new federal building here.

Cold water is probably as good a cure for baldness as any other.

The Pittsburg, Westmoreland & Somerset railroad may open up some business in the summer season, but it shuts it down in the winter. The line is burdened with too big a name.

The B. & O. and the Western Maryland haven't "mixed-up" any in Somerset, but the Somerset people seem to get mixed up on them occasionally.

The people of Pennsylvania did wisely when they declined to elect William H. Berry their Governor. A man who files such an expense account as he does evidently hasn't intelligence enough to be Governor. It displays ignorance of the law of something less creditable.

We should be thankful that we have no candidates for United States Senator among the Fayette county editors.

We should be thankful that we are the first and only city in Fayette county and the Connellsville coke region.

We should be thankful that we have an elephant on our hands.

We should be thankful that we have an energetic Chamber of Commerce and we should be glad to contribute to its support.

The Fayette county divorce mill, like the babbling brook, runs on forever; and there is a lot of bubble in it, too.

The Democratic State Convention cost over $7,000. It was dear at that.

Meyersdale's murder mystery remains unsolved.

Jeanette is no longer an ideal location for glass plants. It has had its day. Manufacturers are now seeking cheap natural gas and plenty of sleeping facilities. Connellsville has the goods.

Crippen died like a gentleman.

President Willard is determined to bring the B. & O. passenger service up to the highest standard of excellence. He has issued orders that trains must hereafter be on time unless there is a good excuse for their being late.

The rioting London Suffragettes are demonstrating their uselessness for the right of suffrage.

The basketball rivalry between Connellsville and Uniontown promises to become a more battle of bank accounts.

The mauling of ten-dollar bills is against public economy and in some cases clearly against the law.

The hospital unfortunates will not be forgotten today.

There are times when the reference business is a dangerous job.

Thanksgiving Day has been changed considerably since President Day at Plymouth. It now includes a short church service, a large turkey dinner and usually an extra session of the sporting Congress.

The Thanksgiving turkey had to come down a bit.

Beautiful Snow sounds all right, but it shovels hard.

REV. PALMQUIST'S THANKSGIVING SERMON.

LETTERS WENT SADLY ASTRAY.

Result Was Domestic Ruction
in Home of Connellsville Man.

HIS VISITS TO MEYERSDALE

It Developed Were Not Strictly on Business, Wife Intercepted Letters and He Had to Make Embarrassing Explanations.

Special to The Courier.
MEYERSDALE, Nov. 21.—(Special)—Because of the winning ways of a Meyersdale girl and the exposure of a gay fellow who trifled with her affections, love flow out the door of a Connellsville home and Mrs. Rose Stumm vows she is at odds with her husband forever.

Never again said Mrs. Stumm would she trust her "hubby" after the disclosures of last week. She lived with him for thirteen years and bore him three children, two of whom, a boy and a girl, are still living, but her domestic bliss ended when she discovered that her husband was playing the part of a gay fellow by passing himself off as a single or divorced man when away from home and making love to other women.

At least such were the representations made by Mrs. Stumm herself to a reporter last Saturday morning.

Rose Stumm is an electrician in the employ of the West Penn Electric Company in and around Connellsville. Several months ago he came in contact with a live wire and received a shock of 1100 volts which badly burned one of his arms, temporarily incapacitating him for his regular work. To fill in the time while his arm was healing, he secured a job as theatrical manager and came to Meyersdale with the Keyes Sisters Comedienne Company during Fair week. That was the beginning of his undoing, or at least of the undoing of his wife's happiness, according to her statements backed by documentary evidence which she submitted to inspection.

It appears that during his stay here during Fair week, with the theatrical company he was managing, Stumm became smitten with the charms of a young saleswoman in one of the Meyersdale stores. He took her to the theatre and showed her various other attentions and has paid frequent visits to Meyersdale since to court the fair one who took him at his word that he was honest and fancy free without any domestic entanglements.

With the exception of only one or two weeks since the close of the Meyersdale Fair, Stumm has been spending his Sundays in Meyersdale away from his family. Mrs. Stumm says he explained that he was negotiating the purchase of a nickelodeon, in which she encouraged him. But when her eyes were at length opened to the fact that there was another attraction that drew her husband Meyersdaleward nearly every Saturday night, and this is how it came about, according to her statement.

Last Thursday Stumm returned to his home in Connellsville from Latrobe, where he had been working, and telephoned to a friend in Uniontown to call at the postoffice at that place and ask for mail addressed to him, which he was to send to Connellsville with a conductor on one of the interurban cars. Stumm was to meet the car at a certain place and get the mail from the conductor. But it was Stumm's hard luck to miss the car at the point where the mail was to be delivered to him. The car later had to pass right in front of the door of the Stumm residence, and Mrs. Stumm happened to be at the front door as the car was passing. The conductor saw her and gave her the letters which he was to deliver to her husband.

Now if they had been business letters, addressed to a typewriter or in a masculine hand, Mrs. Stumm probably would not have thought to open them. But when she noted that they were enclosed in fancy envelopes addressed in a neat feminine hand, and postmarked Meyersdale, her curiosity overcame her, and she could not resist the temptation to ascertain who was her husband's fair correspondent.

The letters began with "Dear Rose" and were full of affection and engaging terms throughout, together with much information to show that the writer and Rose were acquaintances who made no pretense of concealing their feelings from each other.

Mrs. Stumm was stunned by this revelation and she lost no time in calling up the store where the young woman was employed, by long distance phone, and when she got Mr. Stumm's "affinity" to the other end of the wire, she demanded to know what she meant by trying to seduce her husband. The girl began to cry and stated she did not know he had a wife, as he had told her he was divorced three years ago.

Mrs. Stumm was determined to get at the bottom of the matter, so she boarded a train for Meyersdale Friday afternoon, was met at the station by the "affinity" and mutual disclosures ensued, each telling the other what she knew about Rose Stumm's duplicity. They divulged their traits as well as could be, and after Mrs. Stumm secured from the Meyersdale girl all the evidence she wanted concerning her husband's faithfulness, she sent for him and he arrived on

No. 6 to soothe her ruffled feeling Mrs. Stumm met him at the station; they dined together at the Colonial and departed on No. 15. Mr. Stumm apparently having succeeded in building the breach occasioned by his peccadillo, as the wife seemed to have completely forgotten her wrongs as she nestled by him on the train.

Final Service of the Campaign Comes Tonight

Special to The Courier.

SCOTTSBURGH, Nov. 21.—The final service of the evangelistic campaign will occur tonight when the "Link Here Service," a service in which a thrilling story is interspersed with musical selections will be given. Those who have been converted in the meetings occupied a reserved section of the tabernacle last evening and Evangelist Davis preached a special sermon for their benefit on "How To Be a Successful Christian." He urged them to form habits of prayer and Bible study and to unite with some church. "If you fall, don't stay there but get up and go on," said he. A large number made their decision to begin the Christian life in a public manner. Hundreds of people of all ages and classes have been converted in the meetings and there is every evidence that the work will continue after the evangelists have gone. This morning a sunrise meeting was held with another service in the afternoon. At the close of the evening service work will begin in taking down the building to remove it to Connellsville. Evangelist Davis will leave for a few days for his home city, Birmingham, N. Y., in the interest of the Bible school of which he is the superintendent.

Dispute Right of Railroad Co.

Special to The Courier.

SOMERSET, Pa., Nov. 21.—The Western Maryland Railroad Company has filed a bill in equity against Flora S. Black and Frank B. Black, her husband of Meyersdale, to restrain the defendants from tearing up and removing a certain pipe line recently constructed as part of the Connellsville & State Line railroad, a subsidiary of the railroad from Pittsburgh to Cumberland, Md., and which now has under way extensive construction work in the southern part of the county.

The plaintiff railroad company alleges that the pipe line in question was constructed in 1872 on a farm then owned by Solomon Yoder in Summit Township, which was subsequently acquired by the defendants, Mr. and Mrs. Black. There is also a dam on a stream crossing the property of the defendants, the purpose of the dam and pipe line being to supply a water tank.

After filing the bill it was agreed that the matter should remain as they are until such time as a hearing can be had before the court and the matter determined.

GENERAL RYEZ ON WAY TO MEXICO TO LEAD REVOLT.

General Reyes, once a business friend of Diaz, was supposed to be an exile in France. It is reported among the Mexicans that he has already taken passage for New York and would reach Eagle Pass within ten days. Reyes was governor of Nuevo Leon, the hotbed of revolution in Mexico. During the last campaign for president of Mexico, some of his admirers proposed his name as vice president. Subsequent events appeared to prove that Reyes, while appearing perfect amity and friendship of Diaz, was plotting his downfall. Then it was that the stirring events in May, 1910, occurred. Reyes was surrounded by troops and was to all intents and purposes a prisoner. He repatriated to Mexico City, where he was sent on the foreign mission.

Trains Suspended For the Winter

Beginning with the first of December, the passenger service over the Pittsburgh, Westmoreland & Somerset railroad will be discontinued, and no passenger trains will be running over the line during the winter. The present intention of the company being to this effect. It is because of the trouble encountered with snow drifts in the mountains, lying up the line for days at a time, and making railroading terribly expensive that the discontinuance of the passenger service has been decided upon.

Last year it will be recalled, the train was held up for several days, because of a snow storm, while during the severe winter season, it was almost impossible to run on schedule time. The fact that the Pennsylvania company will make it impossible after next Sunday for Somerset county residents to make close connections for the west at Latrobe is supposed to have had something to do with the company's decision, as it will mean a considerable falling off in the passenger patronage.

A PECULIAR ERROR

By Which McKeesport Paid $20,000
Too Much to Contractors.

A blunder which has cost the city of McKeesport of the use of more than $20,000 for the past two years was exposed last night when an audit of the books of that city's water department was presented to the Audit Committee of Councils. At the next meeting of the "Tub City" factors it will be explained to them that on October 25, 1908, the Bowman Brothers Company, a contracting firm, was paid $20,000 for building the McKeesport filtration plant. It will also be explained that this blunder was not discovered until an auditing company came upon it two weeks ago, and that the Bowman Brothers Company was notified and the amount was made good, with interest.

Upon whose shoulders lies the blame for the oversight that night has cost McKeesport a pretty sum had not some of its more progressive citizens fought for more than a year for a clear statement of the city's financial condition, has not yet been ascertained.

SUNNY MONDAY

Soap is cheaper than clothes and it pays, therefore, to get the best soap, even for laundry purposes. The best laundry soap made is a white soap called "Sunny Monday," which contains no rosin and is kind to clothes. One bar of Sunny Monday will go as far as two bars of ordinary yellow laundry soap which contains rosin; its use, therefore, means economy.

THE SOISSON.

"The Missouri Girl."

One of the strongest endorsements of Fred Raymond's famous comedy, "The Missouri Girl," is the fact that it is probably the best self-advertised play in existence. For the past 15 years was excellent comedy has been touring the United States and Canada continually, with from one to three companies, and in that time has built up a reputation that is the envy of the entire theatrical profession and this, solely on its merits. There has never been a dollar spent in the dramatic papers or magazines in advertising "The Missouri Girl." Whenever any writings, pictures or stories have been published, they have been used as news items and not as paid ads, as is usually the case. One

A Physician's Report on Tuberculosis Medicine

"I have used Eckman's Alternative in several cases of tubercular glands of the neck, with excellent results every time. In one case it cost me $50, for the medicine was put on it only until she could breathe, and in a short time an operation was not needed. Suppose your records are just as fine as mine. You know my faith in it."—L. M. Beckman, Alternative is effective in many forms. Read what Mrs. Garvin says: "I have gained twenty-two pounds since February and my life is in perfect health. She is now four months old and I have been gaining weight and I am steadily gaining. I do not cough or raise anything at all. I believe my little trouble cured." (Signed Affidavit) Mrs. M. H. Garvin, of seven children.

Eckman's Alternative cures Bronchitis, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, and all Affections. Ask for booklet of cured cases and write to the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for additional evidence. For sale by all leading druggists and W. A. Beighley in New Haven, and Harry McElhannon in Dunbar.

Reason for its universal popularity is that the play appeals to all classes of theatre goers and does not apply to any particular set or section.

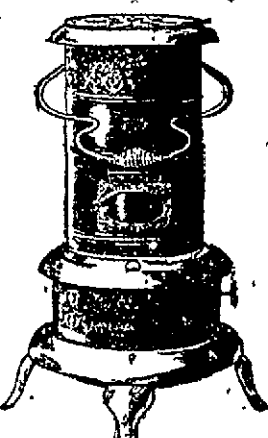

The story while not of the "high raising" sort, is one that is interesting and refreshing, the audience so enjoying itself with the characters, enjoying such happiness and becoming their sorrows. The language is plain, simple and so to the point, no obscure problems and entirely devoid of vulgarity, weaving a story of a quiet people in the rural districts of south on Missouri. Of course the laughable side of life is depicted to a great extent and the author has brought the comedy element into prominence at every opportunity. The sudden jumps from grave to gay and rather strong at times, and would hardly be anticipated by a less daring writer than Mr. Raymond. The characters are types entirely different from those seen in other plays, all taken from life and this is one reason why "The Missouri Girl" is a play that stands alone in a class by itself.

The scenic equipment is complete in every detail. Every foot of the thousands of yards of painted canvas was done in Mr. Raymond's large studio and under his personal direction, by some of the most talented French and American artists. This entire production comes to us intact.

"The Man of the Hour."

"The Man of the Hour" will be seen at the Soisson theatre for one night, Wednesday, Nov. 30. This vivid, vital play of American life by George Broadhurst, has taken a firm hold on the American people. There is scarcely a city of over 20,000 inhabitants between Portland, Maine, and Portland, Oregon, that does not contain a majority of the densely defined types exhibited in the play. This will be the special company that will present the piece here and will include most of the original New York and Boston cast.

like illness, it is often necessary quickly to raise the temperature of a room. For instance, in those hours between midnight and dawn, when the day temperature has been allowed to drop, if you are called upon to get up, the room is chilly and cold. It takes a long time to start up a furnace or fire and raise the temperature by ordinary means.

You can instantly heat a room to any desired temperature with a

GROWING USE OF THE RECTANGULAR

Coke Ovens Both in the Connellsville and Other Regions.

PROBLEMS THE INVENTOR MET

T. J. Mitchell's New Oven Claimed to Have Many Advantages Over the Old Bee-Hive Type—Introduction at the Rainey Plant.

Foremost among inventions intended to reduce labor and cost of coking coal, in the essential operations of leveling the oven and drawing the coke, stands the new rectangular oven and its complementary machinery for performing the operations formerly all done by hand labor. Known throughout the coking fields as the "push" oven, this method of making coking coke is the invention of Thomas J. Mitchell, general manager of the Rainey interests. Mr. Mitchell's improvements form a great stride in advance of the old bee-hive method of making coke. Proof of the need of such an improvement is found in the fact that a number of coking concerns have adopted this form of oven. Today over 2,000 of the rectangular type ovens are in use.

For more than a quarter of a century, virtually the only oven used in the region was the original beehive oven whose construction permitted only the laborious leveling by hand labor and hand drawing of the coke. These means resulted not only in the highest cost of production but a great loss of time in recharging of the ovens, the recharging involving loss of all the heat of the oven. Therefore, the beehive oven when recharged is cold, making the first stage of combustion slow, retarding the coking process by that length of time.

Mr. Mitchell's invention resulted from a careful study of existing methods of drawing coke mechanically from beehive ovens and he came to the conclusion that in order to draw coke mechanically, a new type of oven was demanded. He began his experiments by using a modified type of the long Welsh or Thomas oven. In this oven he found that the coal in the middle of the ovens cooled imperfectly and to remedy that defect he fitted his oven with a right hand, he revised this oven plan by raising the crown of the oven at the middle, and tapering the dome from the center downwards to the oven door, thus practically putting a beehive crown on a rectangular oven. This fitted a combustion chamber, greatest in size in the middle of the oven where the coal had not cooled, thereby making the drawing process more efficient and growing less in dimension towards the ends of the oven. As the needs for such a combustion chamber became less, in proportion to the distance from the regular venting ports at the ends.

The problem of taking the coke from the oven was next considered. By mechanical methods of other inventors this was accomplished by pulling out the coke a little at a time, instead of drawing the coke ahead of the oven. Mr. Mitchell worked out the bold idea by pushing the coke out from the oven at a single operation. He constructed a pusher which next to the end of the oven, pushing the coke ahead of it, traverses the entire length of the oven at one operation. By means of this ram the oven is cleared of its coke in two minutes. At the end of the oven where the coke is discharged the coke is sent upon a rotary conveyor in its travel drops that and these which have accumulated, to load the coke into the car. At the discharging end of the conveyor just before the coke is loaded into the car, other openings for this purpose discharge any particles of dust which failed to clear from the load during the first stage of the coke on the conveyor. The improved type of the oven doors are now used in connection with the Mitchell type of oven. In two minutes the coke is pushed from the oven, the door will be instantly closed and the remaining heat of the oven will be of utility for the next charge.

But one man is needed to operate the rain and another to operate the conveyor. One set of machinery is sufficient to cove 200 ovens 20 feet long and eight feet, six inches high at the top of the dome in the center of the oven. Such an oven will produce from five and three-fourths to six and a quarter tons of coke per charge and will show fewer black ends than the beehive oven.

While hundreds of Mitchell type ovens are in daily use their introduction to date is being made at the new Allison plant and at the Royal plant. The Allison plant is at Mitchell Creek, near Brownsville, on the Dunbar railroad, and the Royal plant near Grindstone, on the P. V. & C. branch of the Pennsylvania. The pusher at two of the blocks of the Royal plant works between the blocks with the loader on the outside of them. When the plant is completed there will be three blocks of these rectangular ovens. The installation of the electric fan, the model type and the modern labor saving machinery in the mines and the excellent boiler house equipment makes this plant one of the cruek collieries of the region. In the boiler house at this plant coal is automatically fed into the furnace by a mechanical apparatus.

SENATOR CRANE IS PICKED TO ASSUME ALDRICH LEADERSHIP IN SENATE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Wool, the king is not dead, after all. He still lives, and he is hard at work trying to find some one to take his place. The king in this place is Senator Aldrich. The senate is to be without the Rhode Island leader, for his term expires, and he announced that he was out of the political game. But this seems to be a joke now—a very big joke—for

Aldrich is at work trying to find a new leader for the senate. He has considered six names. Three have become public, and one of these three may win the prize of the Aldrich mantle. Senators Crane, Penrose and Warren are the three strongest candidates, with the chances favoring Crane. Warren is so far west and is so filled with wool tariffs that Aldrich feels he will not do. Penrose is the typical boss, and Aldrich feels some of the members would object to following his orders. Crane is a politician and a diplomat. He is a close adviser of the president, and the vice-presidents of the capital look to him. Crane assumes the leadership—that is, if Aldrich approves.

COKE MEN

Are Much Interested in the Elkhorn Field in Kentucky.

Interest is general among the coke men in the Elkhorn coking field in Kentucky which is to be developed on the recommendations of T. J. Mitchell, general manager of the Rainey interests. The magnitude of the importance of this field and of the plans for development are shown in the fact that an investment of $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 in railroad building and coal purchase and operation is to be made.

The purchase of the Consolidation Coal Company of Baltimore of 100,000 acres of coal lands in the Elkhorn coking field and the plans for its development on the basis of an annual output of 1,000,000 tons is a wide importance in that it marks the opening up along broad lines of what is regarded the largest undeveloped area of the highest grade coking coal known to exist in the country.

The purchase price of this particular tract was $3,500,000. The Louisville & Nashville railroad will spend $5,000,000 to build to it. The company will spend $1,000,000 on a road of its own and several millions on development, work, and other railroad lines will be built.

The property is said to contain also abundant seams of coal, but in the deal for its purchase its value was based only upon one seam, known as the Elkhorn No. 2. This seam has been prospected throughout the property. It shows the average of 8,000 tons per acre, or an estimated total of 800,000, 900 tons, which at the annual output of 4,000,000 tons, would be sufficient to last 200 years.

"The coke produced in the beehive ovens at Tower Hill was as much perfect as it could be," said Mr. Mitchell. "While I thought it was better than we had obtained from the rectangular ovens at the Royal plant, I do not think that the different style of oven made any particular difference. The coke from the rectangular oven was probably a little over charged. If any one could be satisfied with the structure of the coke they could not but report favorably upon it, as the analysis was well evident."

Plant Inspection Under Way Now

By United States Steel Corporation.

Executive officials of the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company during the past week have been making an inspection of the various plants of that company throughout West Virginia, Ohio and Pennsylvania, and are preparing for the reports to be submitted to the annual meeting of the United States Steel Corporation. The annual visits also of the officers of the other subsidiary companies of the corporation are to take place during the next few days. These include the Carnegie Steel Company, the American Steel and Wire Company, the National Tube Company, and the American Bridge Company, while other subsidiary companies likely will follow in the immediate future.

The reports of these companies include recommendations for improvements and extensions that will be carried out during the coming year, and the budget of maintenance and expense for improvements will be arranged for the financial men of the concern to provide for or prune, down. No statement of the recommendations, of course, will be made known for some time. It is stated now, however, that the Carnegie Steel Company has plans in view for changing many features of the Edgar Thompson works at Braddock and reviewing that plant through the production of new materials. It is also likely that the same company will build additions to its steel car wheel department at McKeesport. Where additional property has just been purchased. Continued improvement and enlargement of the plants for the new sheet and tin plate plant of the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company at Gary, Ind., are expected to be included in the report of this company. Immediate increase in coke oven capacity by the Frick Coke Company is not expected, but a replacement of some of the over plants which have cleaned up the coal properties is likely.

During the coming year, it is expected by the operating officials of the corporation, that some definite steps will be taken toward the first construction of the great scientific branch of the steel industry as represented in the research laboratory that will go up back of Duquesne, and which will be for the development of every new idea for the improvement of process and products that come under the head of Steel Corporation interests. The cost of this great laboratory will approximate $3,000,000, and may be a much larger sum as the plans are further developed. Models of many kinds of steel mills, blast furnaces, open hearth and electric furnaces, cement process and facilities for developing, in fact, every known process for making raw steel, iron and the lighter finished forms of steel.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Nov. 24.—(Special).—The trial of Louis Zelt, Sr., began before Judge J. A. McFadden yesterday afternoon. Zelt, who was indicted for election fraud, was indicted for the First Ward, on November 8, is charged with refusing to answer in a duly appointed election officer and with assaulting another election officer when the latter objected.

With the older Zelt were indicted his two sons, Jacob Zelt, Jr., and Adam Zelt, both charged with assault and battery. The cases will be tried separately. Jacob Zelt, the election overseer, who claims he was assaulted, testified that the Zelts threw him bodily from the polling place.

Drabheim asserts that the only treatment he has used to bring back the hair was pure cold water, used several times a day.

WANTS COMMISSION; DIDN'T SELL COKE.

Coke Company Gives Its Side of Brokerage Company's Suit.

STARVATION PRICES ASKED

Brokers Finally Advised Plant to Close Down and After Contract Was Made Elsewhere Came to Front With a Big Claim.

The mysterious ways in which coke brokers work, their wenders to perform are explained by President P. M. Markel of the Southern Connellsville Coke Company as a result of the suit against that company by the Pittsburg Coal & Iron Company, represented by T. J. Euster. The plaintiff company wants commission on coke sold by the Southern Connellsville company after the brokers were unable to secure orders.

"The situation is just this," explained President Markel this morning. "When we first built our plant we did not know much about the operations of the coke brokers. This man came to us with a proposition to handle our output on a 5 per cent commission. He drew up the contract, saying it was the usual one in such cases. "We went into the proposition with him. We had 22 ovens at our Marion plant. He told us to fire up 20 ovens, which we did. After we had them fired he sent us an order at $1.50 a ton. That was too low, but as we had our ovens fired, we had to fill it or lose the coke. His next order was for five cars at $1.40 and we took it. Then he wanted cars at $1.35, then $1.30 and finally $1.25. Then he said we were running too many ovens and told us to cut out eight, reducing the number to 12. The orders after that were irregular and the prices low. In February, 1909, he told us to close down the plant; that there was no market for coke. This we did. We remained closed, July and August passed with no orders for us. In September there was still nothing doing. In October we made an agreement with Francis Rocks for him to handle our output at $1.30 a ton. Before that we had written frequently to Euster. He was evasive and gave us no satisfaction.

"We tried to pin him down to whether he would demand a commission on the coke we sold Rocks, but he would give us no satisfaction. He finally said he 'wanted to be fair.' After we had contracted with Rocks, this man sent us an order for a car at $1.60 which we turned down. We also refused orders at $1.65 and for three cars at $1.50.

"At the end of the year this man asked us for a statement of our tonnage we had sold Rocks, stating he wanted his commission on these shipments. On January 1 we gave him notice that we would cancel our contract at the expiration of three months and from January 15 until April 15 he did not send us a single order.

"He could not sell our output, but now he claims commission on coke he did not sell and could not sell."

THE PRICE OF THIS COKE IS UNKNOWN.

The price is no object to me; my lot is five per cent, you see. I'm not a coker. I'm just a broker. I sell the coke that others make; I always get the pie and cake. I'm not a coker; I'm just a broker.

HUMBERT'S BOOM.

Big Tract of Timber to Be Opened Near There.

The mining village of Humbert on the Urisia & North Park railroad, five miles from Urisia, has one of its occasional booms. This time it is not coal but lumber. The Tri-State Lumber Company of Uniontown has purchased a large tract of timber further up the Laurel Hill creek and contemplates building 14 miles of track up to their lumber woods. They will have their headquarters at Humbert, where they are erecting a large mill and houses for their employees. This will help the coal business as there are thousands of acres of undeveloped coal lands along the line of the contemplated railroad.

MISS SELINA LUE

and the Soap-box Babies

by MARIE THOMPSON DAVIES

Illustrations by Magnus G. Kettner

COPYRIGHT 1909, THE DOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY.

"Lands alive, child, this is the dress my mother had before the war. I ain't worn it often, 'count of not having time, but I thought I ought to put it on to compliment Mr. Dobbs for asking me to go along with 'em. You see, it's this way. Mr. Dobbs is just the salt of the earth for kindness, except cussing—but he ain't never cussed and joined the church. So when he asked Mary Ellen and me to go to this boat-meeting with him, though it do seem a kinder queer place to go to praise the Lord—a flat-boat tied to a lock—I said we must make out for keep him company. Mary Ellen was just busting down the front of it being so hot to go to light and she so easy overboard, but I perrilled on her. I want us all to look nice for Mr. Dobbs in a happy, contenting kinder mind. When I see a curl of religion sprouting up, I think it's best for kinder shine on it pleasant-like, but not to take too much notice until it roots good. There they come now! Ain't they cute?" Blossom and Ethel Maude look just like a picnic."

And Miss Cynthia smiled delightedly as she exchanged greetings with the enthusiastic family out on the quest for the soul-welfare of the head member. Miss Selina Lue's adjectives had been an not one that applied to them all. Miss Dobbs was buttoned up tight in a dark blue coat, and the perspiration rolled down her happy face from the crown of her black velvet hat, with its remarkable blue bird, into her white cotton lace collar. She gasped and bustled up a constant "mopping." Ethel Maude was in white and stared to the limit of endurance, and had pink boxes tied wherever they would stick.

She Was Wonderful to Behold, Was Miss Selina Lue.

Blossom and Mr. Dobbs were clothed in their Sunday best, and Miss Cynthia's compliments. But Blossom stood on one foot and covered P with the other in evident consciousness of their belated arrival.

"It wouldn't wear them shoes but had in the spring, and I couldn't no way tunnel him," explained his mother.

"My foot's sore," the delinquent grumbled shamefacedly.

"So's mine," whined Ethel Maude, standing first on one and then the other.

"But you're a girl," said her mother decidedly, then firmly settling the yoke of femininity on her young shoulders. "Are you ready, Miss Selina Lue?"

"Well, I think I must be, but I seem to have forgot something. Here's my reticule and my pain fan and I've got money in my glove and put in the collection—but, lands alive, Miss Dobbs, I clean forgot to ask anybody to mind the babies in the store. Whatever will I do? Mr. Kinney has gone to the wharf to stay till the boat comes by to give Mr. Kinney his lunch and Miss Peters went into town and—"

"Oh, Miss Selina Lue, please let me stay with the babies and keep store! I would love it—and I will be ever so careful," said Miss Cynthia with dancing eyes.

"There now, there never was anybody like you for helping along, Miss Cynthia, and I don't think they will be a mile of trouble. You know how I fed them at one o'clock, and the oatmeal and milk is hung down the wall to keep cool. Don't let the Flatiries turn over their boxes, and put a bit on Little Type when you feed her. I washed that dress twice yesterday, and I am afraid it won't hold together till her mother gets back. If anybody wants anything they'll tell you the price and put the money in the box and take the counter. Goodbye! and the party started down the hill.

Half-way down, Miss Selina Lue turned and called back to Miss Cynthia, who stood on the steps with Blossom in her arms: "Mr. Alan likes his eggs fried on both sides and his potatoes smashed."

Heavens! Miss Cynthia had had no idea that her offer of attendance on the soap-boxers had covered the duty of feeding the flock. A wild idea of locking the grocery door and taking the entire small family home with her for the day instantly presented itself, but immediately a sense of mortification overcame her. The "liver blurt" grocery door had never been closed, in her knowledge, to those seeking food, and her honor forbade her doing it now. No, who had assumed Miss Selina Lue's obligations and she would fulfill them to the letter, even if they did include serving the obnoxious barnyarders in a kitchen. "Eggs fried on both sides and smashed potatoes" sounded terribly in the extreme, but Miss Cynthia's blood was up and she both mentally and literally rolled up her sleeves and sailed in to win.

It was on the left side of 12 o'clock, so she decided that time was in her favor. She smothered Blossom with a kiss and attempted to deposit her in her box, but the young lady clung around her neck in a manner most beguiling. The two Flatiries regarded her solemnly, as if taking measure of her capacity for guardianship, and Clemmie seemed to find comfort in showing the corner of her gingham apron. Pattle resorted to suckling her thumb complacently and grabbed at her own pink toes as if she had designs on them in case of a famine.

"Blossom, dear, I must ask you to let me go and see to the smothering of those potatoes—smothering anything appears to be right now," said Miss Cynthia. But Blossom—being the tighter. There was nothing for it but to take her into Miss Selina Lue's little cupboard of a kitchen, that also leaned to the grocery, and enthroned her on a corner of the table.

"Now," said Miss Cynthia to herself as she surveyed the flat, "I think I would better try the first, as it will take some time to get on both sides. Some people do mind putting others to any amount of trouble. I am sure, under most circumstances, I would be satisfied with my eggs fried on one side—but try, I shall be if Miss Selina Lue says so."

"Good! Ah—good!" answered Blossom from her perch.

"I thought you would think so, dear," Miss Cynthia said to her. "I don't doubt you would try for him on three sides if you could, wouldn't you?"

Blossom nodded delightedly with an air of perfect understanding.

"I thought so. Well, I am going to do my best and then if anything is not right it is not my fault. Now, that is the way, I know, and I will let it go and not waste it and find the eggs. How many do you suppose the dear creature eats at a sitting, Blossom?"

Again Blossom's head bobbed cheerfully. She hugely enjoyed being taken into the conversation, did the Blossom.

"Well, here's the half-dozen and here's the rest. Dear me, I hope it's easy to smash potatoes as it is eggs. I wonder if it is right for them to mix up so? Heavens, the things are sticking to the fryer! I'll just stir them around, for I suppose that's what Miss Selina Lue meant by both sides, to mix them up so they won't get so black. The eggs are perfectly hard now so I am going to put them in the dish," and Miss Cynthia, emptied out the charred mass on a plate and set it on the table.

"Of course, Blossom," have known fried eggs all my life, but we don't have them, and I am not perfectly sure how they ought to look. Those seem nice and brown, though those black streaks are not exactly artistic, are they?"

With reassuring eagerness Blossom reached for the dish.

"I'm glad you think so, dear, but you don't want that dinner; yours comes later. Now for 'smothering' the potatoes. When does the smothering come in, before they are cooked?"

Miss Cynthia paused to think. "I don't suppose it makes much difference, and after they are cooked they will be so hot—I am going to do it now. Wasn't it lucky Mr. Selina Lue had peeled them? Why, I never knew potatoes were so hard before they were cooked. No wonder the great-grand-mother likes his smashed, I like them smashed myself, but how am I going to smash them?"

Blossom gurgled intergalically.

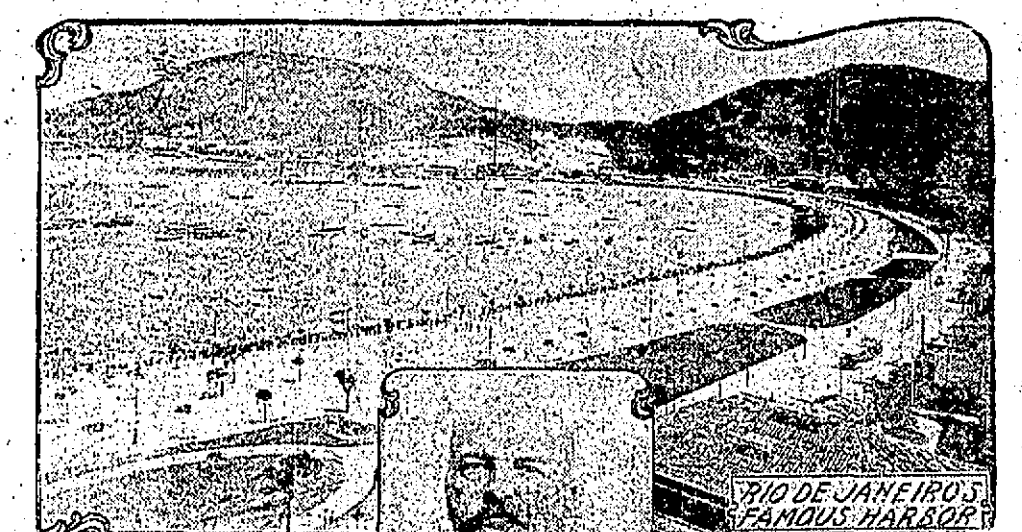

"Thanks for the advice," Blossom. Yes, I am going to set the pan on the table and wash the hot-burned nice and clean, and smash 'em." Miss Cynthia worked with a will and succeeded in quickly reducing the potatoes to a watery, lumpy mass. After a moment's hesitation she emptied them into the frying-pan to which clinging fragments of burned eggs. Her delight was great when she remembered the salt and she poured in a double dose with exceeding liberality. Around and around she spread the mass, which quickly burned to a hue to match the eggs and thus declared itself done.

"Blossom," she remarked earnestly, "why women make so much fuss over cooking I can't see. It is just too black, and smother 'em." A series of plaintive little gurgles and a whimper or two through the door leading into the grocery coincided her of the soap-boxers, and she hastened to answer the summons.

Four solemn babies sat bolt upright and four pink mouths flew wide open. "Bless your darling hearts, it's time for dinnin, and Miss Cynthia's a bad girl to get naughty man's dinner here! Here are the bowl and spoon right here, and she is going to hurry! But instead of hurrying Miss Cynthia stood dumb. She had forgotten where Miss Selina Lue had said the oatmeal and milk were kept! In a panic she began a hurried search and it took her just five minutes to exhaust the possible hiding-places of milk and oatmeal in the grocery. She stood at a sitting upon the vinegar jug and turned on the molasses spigot. No milk and no oatmeal!

In the meantime the plaintive wails from the back of the store had developed into the roar of a hurricane which swelled by the instant but never subsided. The eldest of the four and the spoon which Miss Cynthia had set on the stool before them was the red rag to their rage. The two Flatiries had settled down steadily to the business of making an uproar, and as they screamed each kicked the foot of his brother. Mr. Kent grasped wildly, at his vanishing composure and murmured indignantly. "If you cooked it I am sure there won't be enough, no matter how much you prepared." He mentally kicked himself. Where were the things that ought to have sprung to his brain to match the girl? He went into the kitchen and sat down. The very prospect of the dinner prepared by those white hands was going to his head; he felt safer with the feeling that across the holding hands of the oatmeal-and-milk dinner, Miss Cynthia raised trustful, proud eyes to his.

It was well that he approached his dinner in a mood of distraction, for it was with difficulty that he restrained an exclamation at the first mouthful of eggs that across the holding hands of the oatmeal-and-milk dinner, Miss Cynthia raised trustful, proud eyes to his.

"Is it good?" she asked with bewildering solicitude.

"Good? Watch me!" and there with those eyes fastened on him in shining delight, he swallowed all of the six incinerated eggs and devoured a gulp of a pint of half-a-cup, stone-cold, nauseating potatoes.

Half-way through the dose he paused. Should he leave any for her to devour over, or should he assume a reputation for abnormality of appetite? He hesitated, anything that she should ever find out the truth, and in a rush he finished the job. If, by that time, she had not been standing directly across the table, he would have scraped the dishes, but her nearness confined him and he let her eat aside a teaspoonful of potatoes and a chip of egg.

She was beaming with satisfaction and at his hastily framed apologies for having cleared the table, she answered cheerily:

"Don't say a word about leaving me any. I am too hot to eat for hours. Those blessed babies are asleep already. Could they have waited for exhaustion?"

"I assure you they are safe, and for at least two hours," he laughed, as he rose and stepped to the door. Lighting a cigar, he lingered tentatively, hoping for some sign of invitation to remain. The potatoes dropped from his buttonhole.

Though she raised her eyes to his and said sweetly and directly with genuine tingling every accent: "Thank you for helping me out with them. You—you won't be far if they wake up and get beyond me?"

"Those eyes and that curly mouth! Mr. Alan only really 'come to' as Miss Selina Lue would have put it, when scolded by her wife later on the steps. In fact, he lived through an hour or more of partial eclipse of mind; and when the four-o'clock whistle sounded to call him to the babies while you eat your dinner." His voice was positively collected.

"Aren't you going to have some with me?" he asked politely.

As for Miss Cynthia, some evil fate or perhaps a sleepy chirp from Clemmie, the younger, led her to the back region of the grocery, and while there she idly tasted that spoonful of potato which had been left, with misgivings. A shred of egg followed, and gone was all her complacency, the fruit of Mr. Alan's self-sacrifice.

How would she ever face him again after having literally forced such an awful thing upon him? Her humiliation was complete. Her one thought was a hope that she would never lay eyes on him again.

"Well, well, Miss Cynthia, honey, did you ever see such a day for happenings as this has been to us all?" And Miss Selina Lue stood at the door beaming with delight.

"I don't think I am hungry now," she answered, intent on getting the spoon between Clemmie's uncertain lips. "I hope it will be all right. I never cooked that sort of dinner before, but I followed Miss Selina Lue's directions, so it must be the way you do it." Miss Cynthia was a lovely thing at all times, but in that timid, trustful mood, and in such becomingly disheveled condition, as she bent over her charges she was—ravishing.

Home Course In Health Culture

VIII.—Exercise In the Home

By EUGENE L. FISK, M.D.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

For centuries the alchemists sought an elixir—a magic fluid that would restore exhausted vitality and perpetuate the activities we call life. For many years physicians and chemists, successors of the "medicines men" and alchemists, have laboriously experimented with drugs and chemicals in the hope of at least finding some combination that would give health and increased longevity to mankind. Many valuable drugs and combinations of drugs have been discovered, but it is safe to say that the greatest achievements of modern science have come not through the use of drugs, but through the employment of natural remedies whose powers were so long neglected by the mystic "medicine men" of the middle ages. It is true that diphtheria antitoxin and the wonderful promise of other remedies of a similar class are the products of the laboratory, but these are truly nature's remedies and have no relation with drug treatment. The remarkable fall in the death rate among people under thirty years of age in the past quarter century is almost wholly due to hygiene and the use of natural remedies in disease.

The power of physical training, fresh air and a little surgery to make over the lymphatic, half deformed, month breathing child into a splendid and useful citizen is as wonderful in its way as the powers vainly sought by the alchemists and necromancers.

Troublesome Remedies Unpopular.

It is unfortunate, however, that some of these remedial measures are not so easily prescribed or taken as pills and powders.

To advise a man to take more exercise is very much like telling him

There is a great difference between exercising for health and exercising for muscular development. They are not necessarily identical processes. The vast, bulging muscles of the athlete may be a real burden, calling for large supplies of blood and nutriment and not contributing to harmony of movement or balance of function.

Overdevelopment spells ultimate degeneration, just as disuse spells atrophy and decay.

The object we should keep in view, therefore, is moderate and sufficient exercise of the entire muscular system.

Effects of Exercise.

The circulation and respiration are chiefly affected during exercise and muscular work. There is an increased absorption of oxygen, an increased excretion of carbon dioxide and water; in other words, combustion proceeds more actively in the body, and more fuel, in the form of fat or starches or proteins, is required. All of which goes to show that, whatever man's mind or soul may be, his body is a sort of engine which can no more carry on its work without fuel than a locomotive without coal can drag a train of cars.

Mind and will power alone cannot run the human engine with best tea and slops and food that is not fuel any more than the most skillful engineer can run a locomotive with air in the boiler and a few shavings in the firebox.

The mechanical measure of exercise is the kilogrammeter. It has been determined (Hollander) that walking on a level surface at the rate of three miles (4.8 kilometers) per hour is equivalent to lifting one-twentieth of the weight of the body through the distance walked. To determine the amount of work performed in walking, the weight of the body in kilograms is multiplied by the distance walked.

The product constitutes the number of kilogram meters of work performed. 150,000 kilogram meters is considered the normal average amount of work of exercise required in health.

Best Time for Exercise.

The ideal time for exercise is midway between meals, but few people can arrange to take it at such times. Before breakfast is a suitable time for most people, especially if the exercise is followed by a cold bath and brisk rubbing.

Some people cannot exercise before breakfast without feeling unduly fatigued, the exhaustion often lasting throughout the day. Before retiring is a safer time for such people unless they can arrange for forenoon or afternoon work.

Nervous subjects with an excitible circulation should not, as a rule, exercise before retiring.

Exercise should never be taken just after a meal, and no exercise just prior to eating should be so severe as to cause great fatigue. In either case the digestive functions are impaired, and all benefits may be neutralized.

Forms of Exercise.

Exercise should be graded according to age and condition. When there is actual disease medical advice must be sought and followed or injudicious exercise may prove extremely harmful.

In prescribing exercise a good system is that of Dr. Dudley Sargent of Harvard. In this system the various movements have been given descriptive names to facilitate memorizing them.

The following is a brief outline of the several exercises:

First.—Adoption. Standing with feet together and hands raised before the forehead, as in praying, throw the hands and forearms backward until the arms are on a level with the shoulders and forearms directed upward at right angles with arms. Repeat twenty to thirty times.

Second.—Tree swaying. Stand with feet together and arms thrust straight upward, but not rigid. Sway the body part of the body from side to side.

Third.—Stretching an arm. Stand with feet twenty-four inches apart, arms straight out sideways, face turned to left. Keeping the arms rigidly straight, swing the right arm over the head and down on to the left hand and back to original position, factured to right.

Fourth.—Swimming, breast stroke. Stand with feet twenty-four inches apart, left foot forward, weight resting on right leg, arms at right angles, held close to the side. Thrust arms forward, bend body forward and thrust the arms on a level with the shoulders. Sweep arms outward and backward to original position, imitating a swimming stroke.

Fifth.—Boxer's guard. Stand with feet twenty-four inches apart, right foot forward, weight on left leg, left arm bent and guarding neck, right arm straight downward and backward. Press forward, throwing weight on right leg, and bring right arm up to guard the neck while throwing the left arm downward and backward. Repeat the move, springing from one foot to the other.

Sixth.—Chicken wings. Stand with feet together and thumbs in armpits, raise both elbows while raising left knee to the waist. Return to first position and repeat, raising opposite knee. Keep up the movements alternately.

Eighth.—Rowing. Stand facing the right, feet twenty-four inches apart, right leg forward, arms at right angles and close to sides. Bend forward, weight on right leg, with arms extended, until fingers touch the floor twelve inches in advance of right foot. Return briskly to first position as though pulling on oar. Repeat, facing left.

Ninth.—Restoration. Stand with feet together, face downward, neck of hands touching. Bring hands upward, separating as they pass the face. Then to take distills. Exercise cannot confer its maximum benefit unless some dosage is prescribed and some system followed. But the average man wishes to be made over at once. Any process involving time, patience and effort is repugnant unless it is given a fancy name and has some mystery thrown around it, and then what marvelous results—while the fact last!

describo a circle downward and outward back to first position. Repeat. Begin to inhale deeply as the arms are raised, slowly exhaling as the arms descend.

These movements should be performed from twenty to thirty times at a rate per minute that is not unduly fatiguing. Many simple movements of a similar character will prove effective if regularly and systematically carried out.

It is important to employ exercises that bring into play the abdominal and chest muscles, which encourage deep breathing and prevent the accumulation of fat around the abdomen.

Tree swaying, striking the aryl, chicken wings and signal station are especially good exercises for women and elderly people who are excessively fleshy.

Dangers of Excessive Flesh.

Superfluous fat is not only a burden, but it interferes with the normal functions of the body. It may be caused by too much food and too little exercise or merely a lack of exercise in one with a family tendency to flesh.

Life insurance statistics clearly show that individuals even slightly overweight have a higher death rate than those of average weight. This increased death rate is manifested around middle life and later.

SURE TO BREAK A SEVERE COLD.

Will Overcome all distress From a Bad Cold or the Grippe in Just a Few Hours.

The most severe cold will be broken, and all grippe misery ended after taking a dose of Pope's Cold Compound every two hours until three consecutive doses are taken.

You will distinctly feel all the disagreeable symptoms leaving after the very first dose.

The most miserable neuralgia pains, headache, dull aching head and nose stuffed up, feverishness, sneezing, running of the nose, sore throat, mucous catarrhal discharges, soreness, stiffness, rheumatism pains and other distress vanishes.

Pope's Cold Compound is the result of three years' research at a cost of more than fifty thousand dollars, and contains no quinine, which we have conclusively demonstrated is not effective in the treatment of colds or grippe.

Take this harmless compound as directed, with the knowledge that there is no other medicine, made anywhere else in the world, which will cure your cold, the grippe, misery, so promptly and without any other assistance or bad after-effects as a 25-cent package of Pope's Cold Compound, which any druggist in the world can supply.

NEW ROLLING MILL.

Steel Company at Latrobe Begins Work at New Plant.

LATROBE, Nov. 23.—The newly installed rolling mill at the plant of the Yonah Valley Steel Company was started up for the first time this week and the trial to which it was subjected proved highly satisfactory to the officials of the company. The mill will serve to make possible a tremendous increase in the company's output, its capacity being largely in excess of that of the two furnaces to which the company has been restricted until the present. The company continues to enjoy a splendid market for its product and the outlook is brighter than ever before.
